Joe Williams'

I.V. WAGNER

Tombstone Slug Plate

Joe brought this nice KINSTON BOTTLING WORKS bottle to 'Show and Tell'. In 2002 the damaged I.V. Wagner round center slug shown below sold on EBAY for $175.00. You can bet this pristine tombstone slug will demand a much higher price.

Whit Stallings had this colorful array of bottles from Goldsboro, N.C. on display at the last meeting. To find this many unique slug plates from any North Carolina town is pretty tough. Almost every month Whit seems to come up with the unusual. How can a man known for the $2.00 purchase find so many nice bottles?

Whit Stallings presented this nice LINCOLN LITHIA SPRING WATER from LINCOLN, N.C.

You are looking at an extremely rare set of PINE STATE CREAMERY CO. baby bottles in their original box. Sets like this were given out by milk men to new mothers on their route. Finding the single bottles is a tough task. Finding a mint set of five will take you a long time and a lot of cash. This set is owned by Whit Stallings.

This nice bottle mold was a great addition to 'Show and Tell'. Robby Delius has owned this mold for years and has just recently found the matching bottle. This mold body had two joining pieces, a neck ring that attached on the top to form the bottle top and a bottom plate that attached in the indented area at the bottom of the mold body and formed the bottle bottom. The body, neck ring, and bottom plate were all tooled separately and joined together at the end of the mold making process. The glass blob was fed in from the top and air was blown in to push the glass, like a balloon, to the mold wall forming the bottle.

The mold cavity contained air prior to adding the glass blob. Air vents had to be drilled in the mold body to provide an escape for the air and allow the glass to form smoothly against the mold surface. If you 'zoom in' on the top picture you can see the tiny holes used to vent air from the mold cavity.

As a collector you know the same type of bottle often has different information on the bottom. The ability to change out the bottom plate and neck ring allowed a large number of bottles to be produced from the same mold body. The neck ring and bottom plate were changed as needed.

This nice JO S SALOMONSKY center slug plate, blob top, from Elizabeth City, N.C. was Dean Haley's contribution to 'Show and Tell'.

The show schedule published in BOTTLE TALK will generally list shows of interest on the east coast. It is not meant to be a complete list of all upcoming shows. There are primarily two web sites listing shows throughout the country. If you are traveling on business or taking a long needed vacation, you might want to take a look at the following sites to see if there is a show in the area:

www.fohbc.com/FOHBC_ShowCalendar2.html

www.glswk-auction.com

If you have any nice, clear photos that might be of interest to readers of Bottle Talk please email them to me. I am always looking for bottle and collectible information for the next edition. If you run across articles of interest, or have a desire to write something yourself, please send me a copy. HEY !! I need a little help...after all it's your newsletter.
